Spring 2022

Dear Farm Fresh Consumer:

From a summer trip to the farm stand, to the adventure of choosing a tree for the holiday season, Bucks County is a place where families create special memories with nature all year round. Our county is blessed to be home to dozens of farms, orchards, wineries and markets, that provide a bounty of fresh, local goods and produce.

Bucks County’s connection to agriculture reaches deep into the past. Long before Europeans crossed the Atlantic, the Lenni Lenape Indians hunted, farmed and fished along the Delaware River in Morrisville, Pennypack Creek in Warminster, Neshaminy Creek in Lower Southampton and in the mountains of Nockamixon.

Bucks County’s leaders and residents have never forgotten the importance of farmers or their labor, and many have been farmers themselves. All three sitting county Commissioners trace familial roots back to Bucks County farmers and, prior to joining the state legislature, Commissioner Gene DiGirolamo worked for a quarter-century on his family’s land in Bensalem.

Government partnerships with farmers remain critical to the way the county feeds its residents and maintains a connection to its heritage. The Bucks County Area Agency on Aging works with farmers markets to offer vouchers to elderly residents for fresh fruits and vegetables through the Senior Farmers Market Nutrition Program (SFMNP). The Bucks County Agricultural Land Preservation Program, to date, has preserved more than 18,000 acres over 230 farms.

Both to honor our county’s past and to support and celebrate its present, we, the Bucks County Commissioners, encourage residents to buy local whenever possible, and we thank Penn State Cooperative Extension for aiding in that call by putting together this 2022 edition of “Fresh from Bucks County Farms.”
ABOUT EXTENSION

All universities engage in research and teaching. However the nation’s more than 100 land-grant colleges and universities have a third critical mission:

Extension
means reaching out and, along with teaching and research, land-grant institutions, such as Penn State, “extend” their resources and solve public needs with college or university resources through non-formal, non-credit programs. These programs are administered through county and regional extension offices, which bring land-grant expertise to the most local of levels.

Penn State Extension’s mission is to enhance quality of life by providing informal outreach educational opportunities to individuals, families, businesses, and communities throughout the Commonwealth.

Farms pay a small fee to be included in this guide. This guide does not represent all farms in Bucks County, only those choosing to participate and have products available for retail sale. Information listed in this guide is provided by the participating farmers. If you have questions about production methods or other farm details, contact the individual farmer.

If you are a Bucks County farmer who would like to be listed in next year’s Fresh from Bucks County Farms directory, contact Bucks County Extension at 267-483-2020.

COMMUNITY SUPPORTED AGRICULTURE (CSA)

Share the harvest! That’s one of the ideas behind Community Supported Agriculture. With each share, members enjoy all the fresh food their farming partner is harvesting. In addition, CSA members have opportunities to get directly involved in the farming aspect. Check out the following CSAs, included in this guide:

- Blooming Glen Farm CSA
- Farmer John’s Produce and CSA
- Charlann Farms
- Myerov Family Farm
- Snipes Farm and Education Center
- Solly Farm

BUCKS COUNTY WINES AND CIDERS

Travel from vineyard to vineyard. Featured in the guide are just a few of the local, family-owned wineries in Bucks County.

- Buckingham Valley Vineyards & Winery
- Rose Bank Winery
- Manoff Market Garden and Cidery

COMMUNITY FARMERS MARKETS

Included in this guide are five Bucks County Farmers Markets, where gathering vendors and farmers offer locally-grown foods, unique products, and weekly entertainment.

- Doylestown Farmers Market
- Perkasie Farmers Market
- Plumsteadville Grange Farm Market
- Wrightstown Farmers Market
- Yardley Farmers Market

SPOTTED LANTERNFLY

DOs

- Check your vehicle and belongings for spotted lanternfly (SLF) before traveling within or outside the quarantine zone and destroy any that you find.
- If you find SLF, destroy it (use a flyswatter, your shoe, or a vacuum!). Visit extension.psu.edu/spotted-lanternfly or call 1-888-4BAD-FLY for more information on how to manage SLF on your property.
- Use a circle trap around trees to catch SLF. If using sticky bands around trees, you must build a raised guard of screening around the band to avoid accidental capture of wildlife. Visit extension.psu.edu/spotted-lanternfly for more information.
- Read and follow the pesticide label and use pesticides only when appropriate.

DON’Ts

- Don't panic! SLF does not bite, sting, or attack your house.
- Don't use cleaning or other household products to kill SLF; they can be unsafe to people, pets, and the environment.
- Don't use insecticides when you see just a few; instead, use a flyswatter or your shoe.
- Don't use insecticides on plants in bloom; they can harm pollinators and other beneficial insects.

From a young age both Jay and Jayne Wildemore were interested in small scale farming. Their shared dream of a family farm began when they met as Agriculture majors at Penn State University in 1978. After graduation, Jay and Jayne married, started jobs, and eventually began searching for farmland in Bucks County. Instead of working with a realtor, however, Jay utilized the USDA Soil Survey and local tax maps to find parcels with Class I soil: fine, deep, level, well-drained, and capable of growing almost anything. Jay knocked on a few doors, and in 1984 the couple purchased what was to become their own small fruit and vegetable farm in Chalfont. They built their home and the farm from “ground zero” while working full-time and raising two sons. In spring 1989, the Wildemore family launched its pick-your-own (PYO) strawberry business.

Now 33 years later, Wildemore Farm offers a variety of sustainably grown fruits and vegetables and remains a beloved PYO destination for its fields of tasty, ripe strawberries and luscious blueberries. The PYO business accelerated during the Covid pandemic, providing families with a safely distanced outdoor farm experience. PYO strawberry season usually begins Memorial Day weekend, and PYO blueberry season in late June.
On Wednesdays between 4:00pm-7:00pm, mid-July through mid-October, Jay can be found with his bounty (much picked the same day) at the relatively recent New Britain Borough Farmers Market, located on the grassy area behind the New Britain Baptist Church at 22 East Butler Avenue in New Britain. Jay’s preferred garlic variety, German Extra Hardy, is harvested in mid-July and sold for scapes, bulbs, and planting stock in home gardens. The garlic sells out by early September.

On Saturdays between 8:00am-1:00pm, mid-April through mid-October, you can find Jay in person at the Doylestown Farmers Market with seasonal offerings of lettuce, Swiss chard, kale, collards, tomatoes, eggplant, pepper, zucchini, yellow squash, and onions, as well as peaches, apples, and sour cherries. Pro tip: in April and May, Jay offers farm-grown vegetable transplants for home gardeners at the market, prioritizing disease-resistant, productive, and flavorful varieties. They sell quickly! And around Memorial Day, Wildemore Farm’s generous cut peony bunches are especially popular.

Community plays a central role in the Wildemore family farm’s mission of growing food. Jay served on the Penn State Extension Executive Board for several years. Wildemore Farm’s excess produce is harvested, packaged, and distributed by Rolling Harvest Food Rescue which serves families in need, as well as food pantries, in Bucks County and the surrounding area.
The spotted lanternfly is an invasive insect that has spread throughout southeastern Pennsylvania since its discovery in Berks County in 2014. This pest presents a significant threat to Pennsylvania’s forests, yards and gardens, agriculture, and recreational facilities and activities.

Do your part to protect our state treasures! Before you leave a quarantined area, check for the spotted lanternfly (or its egg masses) on your car and on picnic and recreational gear.

If you see it, kill it! For more information on the spotted lanternfly, the quarantined area, and how to manage the pest on your property, visit: extension.psu.edu/spotted-lanternfly
